

Over 80% of Malawians fear hunger more than Covid-19, study shows

AfricanTimes Tou Tiao

20-06-03 11:41

IOL

Follow

Cape Town – The majority of Malawians fear Covid-19 will lead to food insecurity and are also more worried about the social implications of having the virus, rather than being infected itself, a study shows.

The report by the Institute of Public Opinion and Research (IPOR) released on Monday shows that 81.78 percent of people in the country fear they will go hungry due to Covid-19, compared with 17.72 percent who do not.

Educated and older citizens are less likely to fear hunger due to the virus, while those living in southern parts of the country and who view themselves as outsiders are more likely to fear hunger.

This comes as no surprise considering that 3.3 million Malawians are in the Integrated

Play

Food Security Phase Classification of high malnutrition, which leads to chronic poverty or a humanitarian catastrophe.

The IPOR poll -- conducted between May 7 and May 28 -- shows that 76 percent of Malawians fear the negative social sanctions associated with being infected with the virus, and that others will think poorly of them for having Covid-19.

Malawians are either very worried about being infected or not worried at all, as illustrated by a similar percentage of people who picked either option in the "56+" age group.

The largest proportion of people who are very worried about contracting Covid-19 are 18- to 35-year-olds and 36- to 55-year-olds.

Furthermore, the highest percentage of those who are very worried about infection live in northern Malawi, along the country's borders with Tanzania and Zambia.

IPOR is a research organisation based in Malawi's southern city of Zomba, and provides social science research as well as advisory and consulting services.

As of June 2, Malawi had recorded 336 confirmed cases of Covid-19, with four deaths, according to World Health Organisation data.

Play

(This article from the Internet, do not represent the views and positions of CHNM)

disclaimer

1. The website (website: 52hrtt.com) provides users with information storage space and other services, and users guarantee that the published content enjoys copyright or has obtained legal authorization, and will not infringe upon the legitimate rights and interests of any third party.
2. The ownership of articles published by the platform users belongs to the original author, which does not mean that they agree with the opinions and positions of the original author.
3. Due to the huge amount of information on the platform, it is impossible to put an end to all infringing ACTS. If there is any infringement, please contact us (fujian bibi information technology co., LTD. Email: hrtt@52hrtt.com) for timely deletion.

Extended reading

Sweden's 'herd immunity' hopes are fading as only ...

AfricanTimes

20-06-22 10:01

Covid-19: Tsunami looms as Eastern Cape battles...

AfricanTimes

Today at 09:33

Covid-19: Patients refuse to self-isolate or use stat...

AfricanTimes

Today at 09:36

Over 1,200 Beijing flights cancelled after new...

AfricanTimes

20-06-17 14:55

Covid-19 wrap: Beijing

Play

cancels flights, WHO hail...

AfricanTimes

20-06-17 11:49

Suggested Reading

Covid-19 wrap: Global deaths surge past 475 00...

AfricanTimes

Today at 14:59

'This is not a land grab. We are taking back what...

AfricanTimes

Today at 14:43

Chinese, Egyptian musicians hold concert t...

Open app ChinaDaily

Yesterday 11:28

MTN partners with UN-backed mobile virus...

AfricanTimes

Today at 14:55

Schools: Dept gears up for phasing in other grades,...

AfricanTimes

Today at 14:47

The Arctic hit its hottest temperature on record,...

Open app BusinessInsider

Yesterday 10:18

Saudi Arabia battling coronavirus surge, will...

AfricanTimes

Today at 15:01

All Comments

Play

No Comments!

Open the Chinese headlines, comment

Play